Brief Summary

Report on Community Engagement Activity 2

Date: 20th September 2025

Topic: Participation of MBA students in Social Welfare with collaboration Sawali Health Care Center and Seva Bharati Ichalkaranji .

The Department of Management Studies, MBA Program, Vivekanand College, Kolhapur, encouraged its students to participate as volunteers in a social service activity organized by Sawali Health care Center, Kolhapur and Seva Bharati Ichalkaranji collectively , a reputed organization that provides healthcare facilities across different locations in Kolhapur through its mobile healthcare units (at Sawali Health Care Centre) . The main objectives of this initiative were to promote healthcare awareness and social responsibility among MBA students by engaging them in healthcare facilities, to provide practical exposure to healthcare management practices through involvement in organizational, administrative, and support activities, and to develop empathy, service orientation, and problem-solving skills by working closely with patients, healthcare staff, and communities. During the program, MBA students actively assisted in various roles such as managing patient registrations, coordinating the flow of patients to doctors, supporting in distributing medicines, guiding visitors to appropriate facilities, and assisting healthcare staff in organizing awareness sessions on preventive health and hygiene. Their participation not only ensured smooth operations of the healthcare services but also provided direct interaction with patients from rural and underprivileged sections of society. By working in these mobile healthcare facilities, students were exposed to the ground realities of healthcare delivery, such as the difficulties faced by patients in accessing medical treatment, the importance of timely intervention, and the challenges of managing resources effectively in a mobile setup. The experience resulted in valuable outcomes aligned with the intended objectives. Firstly, students developed an improved understanding of healthcare challenges and community needs, gaining practical insights into how healthcare services are delivered in real-life conditions. Secondly, their teamwork, communication, and organizational skills were strengthened as they collaborated with doctors, healthcare staff, and fellow volunteers to ensure efficient patient care and coordination. Finally, the volunteering experience contributed to their holistic development as socially responsible professionals, nurturing compassion, responsibility, and the ability to integrate management knowledge with social service. For many students, this was a transformative learning experience that went beyond academics, as they realized the importance of empathy and human connection in professional growth. In conclusion, the volunteering activity with Seva Bharati Ichalkaranji allowed MBA students to meaningfully contribute to society while simultaneously enhancing their personal and professional development. It reinforced the fact that management education is not limited to corporate knowledge alone but also involves building values of service, responsibility, and leadership that can create a positive impact on communities. Such initiatives not only benefit society but also shape students into future leaders who are competent, compassionate, and socially conscious.
